Siena is about 150 miles (245 kilometers) northwest of Rome in the part of Italy known as Tuscany.

Siena is about 50 miles (77 kilometers) from Florence (Firenze).

The Dominican church of San Domenico in Siena

The long, three-storey building to the lower right of the church is the sanctuary built around the original house of Catherine of Siena.

The modern “casa-santuario” built around the original 14th century home of Catherine of Siena.

Inside the sanctuary, the floor of the original kitchen in the family home is demarcated in the center of the room. The original hearth is under the altar. Not picture d: A chapel has been built where the family garden once was; the large crucifix before which Catherine received the invisible stigmata is above the altar.

St. Catherine's "cell"
(the word connotes
a monastic cell)
under the staircase
in her family home.
She spent three years here.

San Domenico is the first church to be named after St. Dominic de Guzman, founder of the Dominican order (Order of Preachers). It is plain and unadorned, typical of the early mendicant churches.

The interior of the basilica. At the rear of the church (not seen) is the chapel of the Mantellate where Catherine and the other Dominican penitent women would pray. In another side chapel is “la sacra testa”—the relic of the saint’s head. (Go back to home and click on “La sacra testa” under “True likenesses of Catherine of Siena”).

The ancient castle of Belcaro, located about a mile from Siena. Catherine established a monastery of Dominican nuns here. The community went out of existence a few years after her death.

Ancient baths of Bagno Vignoni, about 26 miles (42 kms) southeast of Siena, where Catherine's mother brought her as a teenager in a failed attempt to make her more attentive to her appearance.

The tomb of Catherine of Siena is under the high altar in the basilica of Santa Maria sopra Minerva, Rome.

Maria sopra Minerva.

The church was built over an ancient temple to the goddess Minerva circa 1280 by the Dominicans.

SANCTA CAT
VIRGO DE S
ORDINIS SA
DOMINIC

- Off the sacristy is a small chapel the walls of which were taken from the room in which Catherine died in 1380 in a building, still standing, just a stone's throw from the Minerva.

And here is where Catherine actually died in 1380, now converted into a chapel (La Cappella del Transito) at Piazza di Santa Chiara 14, very near the Minerva. It is open to the public on April 29, feast of St. Catherine of Siena
